HOLY LIVING AND HOLY DYING

The Revd Canon Dr William Lamb

In 1651, Jeremy Taylor, one of the great Caroline Divines, published The Rule and Exercises of Holy Dying. It was a companion volume to another book he had published a year earlier, The Rule and Exercises of Holy Living. These books drew on a well established tradition of writing which dated from the mid-fifteenth century. The ars moriendi or 'art of dying' tradition was often invoked to exhort others to pursue the ars vivendi or 'the art of living'.

Jeremy Taylor was one of the great moral theologians of the Church of England, and indeed, of the Church of Ireland. Born in 1613 and educated in Cambridge, he came to enjoy the patronage of William Laud, the Archbishop of Canterbury, becoming a Fellow of All Souls College in 1635. He preached a Sermon before the University of Oxford at St Mary's on the 5th November, the anniversary of the Gunpowder Plot, in 1638. He eventually became a parish priest, and during the English Civil War, he seems to have cultivated a certain anonymity. Following the Stuart Restoration, he became the Bishop of Down and Connor in Ireland.

In writing about Holy Living and Holy Dying, Taylor was seeking to draw out the moral implications of living well in the light of the Christian gospel. Before the Reformation, much of this kind of reflection had been contained in priest's handbooks during the High Middle Ages. These books were devised to offer advice to confessors providing counsel for penitents when confessing their sins. But as the practice of auricular confession became less common following the English Reformation, Taylor found in the ars moriendi tradition a suitable vehicle which enabled him to commend a life of holiness and a pattern of sanctification to lay Christians as they sought to follow in the way of Jesus Christ. Of course, the gospels are dominated by passion narratives, which invite reflection and meditation on the significance of Christ's death, and perhaps provokes reflection on our own mortality.

This ars moriendi tradition seems rather alien to us in the twenty-first century. We tend to avoid all talk of death, and we have so medicalized death that it is often hidden from view, unseen and unwitnessed. The thought of imagining oneself on one's deathbed in order to discover what makes life worth living seems macabre to us. And yet, in our willingness to excise the possibility of death from our imagination, to avoid all thought of death, we can all too easily be tempted to deny the terror of death. We imagine naively that we can control or subdue death. But the truth is that, for all the ingenuity and capability of human beings, death is present, powerful and active in every moment, in every event and transaction of human experience. That said, death is seldom discussed.

The paradox is that as we look forward to Michaelmas Term and beyond Oxmas, to Advent and Christmas, we can easily become preoccupied with the anticipation of a birth. And yet, as we move through the month of November, the Feast of All Saints, the Commemoration of All Souls, Remembrance Sunday and the commemoration of numerous martyrs, the Church invites us to meditate on these intimations of our own mortality. The season of Advent is not simply a precursor to Christmas. At the heart of Advent is an invitation to reflect on the four last things: death, judgement, heaven and hell.

The Jesuit theologian, James Keenan, points out that the ars moriendi tradition is an exercise in the imagination. He contrasts this with grief: 'Grief is not an act of imagination. It is existential. Grief is also not a one-time affair but an ongoing one; ...it's a lifelong one. And in this sense it is an awakening or an epiphany of the gap. Grief is not an imaginary encounter with death; it is death interrupting life. It is love exposed, raw. It is a space that we enter and feel transformed by the loss of, and yet the presence of, love.'

In the course of this term, there will be a number of events which will provoke further reflection on holy living and holy dying. These gentle discussions are intended to draw out our own, sometimes raw, human experience of death and grief, while at the same time provoking us to reflect on love, and faith, and hope.

BIBLE STUDY - READING GENESIS

Fridays during University Term | Old Library
12.45pm - 1.30pm

This term, we will be studying the Book of Genesis with the help of Marilynne Robinson's Reading Genesis. It is a book which takes us through the story of Creation, the Fall and the loss of Eden, the account of the Flood and, then the disruption of human unity at Babel. According to Robinson, to explore these stories 'is not to say that they happened or that they didn't happen, but that their sequence is an articulation of a complex statement about reality.' Time and again the stories we find in Genesis help us to think about what it means to be human 'The book of Genesis begins with the emergence of Being in a burst of light and ends with the death and burial of a bitter, homesick old man.' Come and join us as we explore this text in all its wonder and complexity. Tea and coffee are provided.

SUNDAY FORUM

Sunday lunchtimes | Old Library | 12noon - 1.00pm
13 October, 17 November

“AND THEY ALL ATE, AND HAD ENOUGH...”

Sunday 13 October
Old Library | 12noon

The Eucharist is sacrifice. The Eucharist is memorial. It is also, fundamentally, a meal.

We live in a city where lack of access to good food contributes to a 13-year life expectancy gap between Jericho and Blackbird Leys, and in an overheating world on the brink of global food crisis. But every time we gather in church to share bread and wine with strangers and friends, Jesus gives us a vision of a new table fellowship, and a way to live out His risen life.

I'll be exploring how reconnecting with our Lord's Supper as supper can help the Church in Oxford to live out her eucharistic vocation into food justice for all.

Chris Leckey will explore how reconnecting with our Lord's Supper as supper can help the Church in Oxford to live out her eucharistic vocation into food justice for all.

THE SECRET LIFE OF THE LIBRARY

Sunday 17 November | Old Library | 12noon
Eleanor Peers and Ashley Cushman

Oxford is home to many unique library collections, in addition to its two universities. Libraries, along with their staff and systems, are crucial to academic research and teaching - and yet they are rarely the focus of attention. In this Sunday Forum two of the congregation's librarians offer a glimpse of the vast collections and infrastructures that underpin Oxford's research and teaching, in addition to the commitment and skill of those who maintain them.

THE VALLEY OF THE SHADOW OF DEATH

Death is one of the few remaining taboo subjects in our society, and yet it is also one of the few true universals of human experience. This term, as we move through the season of All Souls and All Saints, we will mark them with three events to open up conversation about death, dying, bereavement and the afterlife.

A BRIEF HISTORY OF DEATH

Sunday 20 October
5.00pm – 7.00pm
Old Library

Join four eminent historians for a discussion of how attitudes to death and dying have changed through the centuries and across cultures. We will consider differences in death practices, beliefs about the afterlife, care of remains, and attitudes to violent death. We will discuss what changing attitudes towards death say about our own values today.

DEATH CAFE

Friday 1 November | 6.00pm
– 8.00pm | Old Library

Gather to eat cake, drink tea and discuss death. This is a completely open discussion with no agenda, no expectations, and no right answers. Death Cafes have been running across the world since 2011, and their aim is 'to increase awareness of death with a view to helping people make the most of their (finite) lives'.

THE ART OF DYING

Saturday 16 November
10.00am – 12noon
Old Library

This panel discussion will bring together specialists from the University of Oxford and beyond. A theologian, a forensic scientist, a funeral director and a palliative care doctor meet to discuss the intersection of academic and practical approaches to death and dying, and what these different disciplines and industries can learn from each other.

CATTE STREET ILLUMINATIONS

Wednesday 6 November | 2.30pm – 4.00pm
Bodleian Library

In the Middle Ages, before the construction of the Radcliffe Camera, the area between St Mary's Church, where the original University library was located, and Duke Humfrey's Library, which became the Bodleian Library, was the centre of Oxford's bustling book trade and the production of manuscripts. There are many illuminated manuscripts within the Bodleian Library, which were produced on Catte Street in the shadow of the University Church. Come and join us on a tour with Dr Andrew Dunning, Curator of Medieval Manuscripts, as we explore some of the great treasures in the Bodleian Library. Places are limited, so please book online.

Suitable for ages 7 upwards; adults warmly invited! Book a free place on Eventbrite.

VOLUNTEERING AT THE UNIVERSITY CHURCH

The University Church of St Mary the Virgin is one of the oldest public buildings in Oxford. It remains the spiritual heart of the oldest University in the United Kingdom. It is the place where the University of Oxford began.

The Church remains open every single day of the year. It is a place which is open for prayer and worship. It is also a place where people can experience the beauty and heritage of this city, and enjoy hospitality and refreshment. We estimate that approximately half a million visitors a year come to St Mary's from all over the world.

We are currently looking to increase the number of volunteers who assist with our ministry of hospitality, particularly during the summer months. Volunteering roles range from being a welcomer, to offering brief tours to visitors as a guide, to helping with the maintenance and small conservation projects, as well as flower-arranging and helping to make the church look welcoming and beautiful. Volunteers enjoy a supportive environment with great colleagues. Training is provided and we make every effort to ensure that volunteers work in a safe and secure environment. If you are interested in volunteering and joining our training programme this autumn, please contact Ana-Maria Niculcea, the Volunteer Coordinator: ana-maria.niculcea@universitychurch.ox.ac.uk or why not attend our volunteering fair on Sunday 3 November at 11.45am in the Chancel?

Please help to keep the Church open for everyone

UNIVERSITY SERMONS MICHAELMAS TERM 2024

The practice of delivering University Sermons dates back to the earliest days of the University of Oxford. Each year men and women from many different traditions are invited by the Vice-Chancellor to deliver sermons 'before the University'. The University's motto from Psalm 27, Dominus illuminatio mea (The Lord is my light), captures something of its purpose: the illumination of the mind in the context of prayer. Today, these sermons occur at the University Church and in College Chapels across the University. They provide an opportunity to hear thinkers from a range of disciplines and perspectives, drawing together the life of learning, spiritual discovery, and the quest for truth.
